CASE NO. 2:10-cv-01356-RLH (GWF)

INTRODUCTION

Pursuant to Stipulation and Order of this Court (Dkt. 149), Democratic Underground submits this final brief regarding the impact of the Court’s June 14 Order (Righthaven LLC v. Democratic Underground, LLC, 2011 WL 2378186 (D. Nev. Jun. 14, 2011)) on future proceedings in this action. As Stephens Media now admits (Dkt. 152), there is no real basis to reconsider the June 14 Order, nor to dismiss Stephens Media from this action. As to Righthaven, the June 14 Order, properly construed, forecloses Righthaven’s efforts to intervene based on its latest recharacterization of the Strategic Alliance Agreement (“SAA”). Thus, Democratic Underground respectfully submits that this Court should make clear that its prior ruling has put this matter to rest. Righthaven is not entitled to return to Court—in this action or any other—and pretend that the SAA is something other than what this Court found it to be. While Stephens Media may continue to pursue whatever course it desires, Righthaven’s right to sue under the SAA has been determined, and it cannot be revived by any further restatements or clarifications.

ARGUMENT

I. THE JUNE 14 ORDER WAS AN ADJUDICATION ON THE MERITS OF RIGHTHAVEN’S LACK OF OWNERSHIP OF THE COPYRIGHT AT ISSUE, PRECLUDING SUBSEQUENT CLAIMS.

Righthaven seeks to avoid the definitive effect of this Court’s conclusion that it lacked ownership sufficient to pursue a claim under the SAA by claiming that the June 14 Order was merely a decision on jurisdiction. Dkt. 150 at 6. It therefore claims that that Order constituted a dismissal “without prejudice” leaving it free to sue again on the same facts, or whenever it chooses to manufacture new allegations that contradict the facts determined by the Court. Id. To support this argument, Righthaven cites generic authorities to the effect that (i) dismissals purely for lack of jurisdiction generally do not constitute dismissals on the merits, and (ii) lack of standing is often equated with lack of jurisdiction, to conclude, (iii) ipso facto, a dismissal for lack of standing must be without prejudice or preclusive effect. Id. at 6-7.

The syllogism does not hold. None of Righthaven’s generic authorities address the present situation, where the determination of lack of “standing” is intertwined with determination of the merits and therefore constitutes a decision on the merits. Righthaven has conceded that

1 ownership of a protectable copyright interest is an essential substantive element of any claim for 2 copyright. See Dkt. 140 (“DU Opp.”) at 16-18. Righthaven also has conceded that standing is 3 intertwined with the merits. Righthaven LLC v. Eiser, D.S.C. Case 2:10-cv-03075-RMG (Dkt.
 4 68) at 6-7 (filed here as Dkt 154, Ex. 1). Yet, Righthaven ignores the numerous authorities 5 holding that when standing is intertwined with the merits, dismissal with prejudice is required.
 6 Id. It ignores the numerous Ninth Circuit cases in which dismissal for lack of standing constitutes 7 a dismissal with prejudice. And it ignores decisions, such as Pannonia Farms, Inc. v. Re/Max 8 Int’l, Inc., 407 F. Supp. 2d 41, 43 (D.D.C. 2005), where courts have given determinations of lack 9 of copyright ownership preclusive effect as decisions on the merits. See also Pony Express 10 Records, Inc. v. Springsteen, 163 F. Supp. 2d 465 (D. N.J. 2001) (giving collateral estoppel effect 11 to British court’s determination that plaintiff did not own copyright).

12 Most telling, however, is Righthaven’s failure to respond to HyperQuest, Inc. v. N’Site 13 Solutions, Inc., 559 F. Supp. 2d 918, 920 (N.D. Ill. 2008), aff’d 632 F.3d 377 (7th Cir. 2011), 14 which is directly on point. In that case, Judge Shadur first dismissed HyperQuest’s claims due to 15 lack of ownership of any exclusive right in the copyright, ordering that “both the complaint and 16 this action are dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.” Id. at 923. HyperQuest later 17 argued that this order did not provide a basis for defendant’s recovery of attorneys’ fees because 18 it was only a ruling on jurisdiction, not a decision on the merits. Judge Shadur explained that, 19 while his initial use of the term “jurisdiction” might have led to confusion, “[t]here is no question 20 that the Order dismissed HQ’s action with prejudice—because HQ lacks standing, it cannot bring 21 suit again.” Id. at 921.

22 In so ruling, Judge Shadur explained the distinction between lack of jurisdictional power 23 to decide a case (resulting in a dismissal without prejudice), and lack of standing to assert a 24 federal question the court was empowered to decide, quoting Rent Stabilization Ass’n v. Dinkins, 25 5 F.3d 591, 594 n.2 (2d Cir. 1993) (emphasis in original):

26 [S]tanding and subject matter jurisdiction are separate questions While standing, 27 which is an issue of justiciability, . . . addresses the question whether a federal court may 28 grant relief to a party in the plaintiff’s position, subject matter jurisdiction addresses the question whether a federal court may grant relief to any plaintiff given the claim asserted.
 Thus, although both subject matter jurisdiction and standing . . . act to limit the power of 1 federal courts to entertain claims, that is, act to limit the courts' "jurisdiction" in the 2 broadest sense of the term, the two must be treated distinctly.

3 Hyperquest, 59 F. Supp. 2d at 920 (internal citations omitted). As in HyperQuest, this Court's 4 June 14 Order did not specify whether the dismissal was with or without prejudice. But as in 5 HyperQuest, this Court plainly had power over the federal question presented in this action—6 indeed, it is proceeding forward with this action with the real party in interest, Stephens Media.

7 Righthaven's assertion that this Court's dismissal was "without prejudice" is consistent 8 neither with the practical effect of the June 14 Order, nor its language. The Order noted that 9 dismissal of Righthaven's complaint "of course, does not affect Democratic Underground's right 10 to bring a motion for attorney fees under the Act." See June 14 Order at *7; accord Cadkin v.
11 Bluestone, 290 Fed. Appx. 58 (9th Cir. 2008) (affirming attorneys' fees after plaintiff found not to 12 own copyright). The right to fees is consistent with a dismissal with prejudice. Indeed, it is 13 especially important that this Court clarify that its dismissal is with prejudice given that 14 Righthaven (like HyperQuest) is arguing vigorously that dismissals for lack of standing are "mere 15 jurisdictional" dismissals that immunize Righthaven from any fees in the actions it wrongfully 16 commenced. Righthaven LLC v. Hoehn, 2:11-cv-00050-PMP Dkt 38; Righthaven LLC v.
17 DiBiase, 2:10-cv-01343-RLH Dkt. 87.

18 Further, there is nothing in the June 14 Order suggesting that, following its dismissal of 19 Righthaven's claims, this Court intended that Righthaven could return later to sue again. Instead, 20 this Court held that Stephens Media is the real party in interest, and that "the SAA is not void or 21 unenforceable [or ambiguous], it merely prevents Righthaven from obtaining standing to sue from 22 the Assignment." June 14 Order at *4. The Court so held knowing that the "Clarification" had 23 been signed by the parties, and that Righthaven was hoping that changing the facts would allow it 24 to try again to create standing. Nonetheless, the Court ruled that "since the complaint has been 25 dismissed, the issues raised by the counterclaim can only be adjudicated by litigating the 26 counterclaim." Id. at *8. The Court affirmatively did not decide whether the Clarification's 27 cosmetic amendments would have made any difference—though it expressed its doubts. Id. at *4 28 n.1. But the Court did not decline to reach the Clarification so as to preserve Righthaven's ability

1 to create standing on another day; the dismissal for lack of standing recognized that the 2 sufficiency of Righthaven's standing under the SAA had been fully determined.

3 Accordingly, this Court should make clear that its dismissal based on standing, which is in 4 turn based on the lack of the element of ownership of a copyright, was a dismissal with prejudice.
5 That conclusion precludes relitigation of that issue by intervention or otherwise. See also 6 Brereton v. Bountiful City Corp., 434 F.3d 1213, 1218-19 (10th Cir. 2006) ("It cannot be gainsaid 7 that even a dismissal without prejudice will have a preclusive effect on the standing issue . . .").

8 II. RIGHTHAVEN MISCHARACTERIZES JUDGE MAHAN'S RULING IN 9 PAHRUMP.

10 Righthaven's suggestions that Judge Mahan's dismissal of the complaint in the Pahrump 11 case allows it to intervene here, and that Democratic Underground's Consolidated Opposition 12 (filed the day before the hearing) somehow defies that ruling, are incorrect in numerous respects.
13 In fact, Judge Mahan's August 12 ruling includes none of the holdings asserted by Righthaven in 14 its brief. See Righthaven v. Pahrump Life, No. 2:10-CV-01575, Dkt. 67. Judge Mahan 15 specifically denied Righthaven's request for leave to amend and dismissed its complaint for lack 16 of standing under the initial SAA. Judge Mahan had no need to, and did not, address the impact 17 of HyperQuest or the arguments that Righthaven had committed a fraud on the court, engaged in 18 champerty, or engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. Nowhere did Judge Mahan, in 19 dismissing Pahrump over Righthaven's objections, reject any of these arguments.

20 Instead, the only open question after Judge Mahan's August 12 ruling is "whether the 21 matter should now be dismissed with or without prejudice" in light of "the relationship of 22 Righthaven's ownership of the copyright at the time the suit was filed to (1) Righthaven's 23 standing in this case and (2) the merits of Righthaven's copyright infringement claim." Id. at 6.
24 While Judge Mahan has asked for further briefing in Pahrump to answer this question, this Court 25 is the one to determine whether its June 14 Order constituted a dismissal with or without 26 prejudice. As explained herein, it should be considered to be with prejudice.

1 III. RIGHTHAVEN DOES NOT MEET THE STANDARDS FOR INTERVENTION.

2 A. The Request to Intervene is Untimely.

3 Righthaven's claim that its intervention is timely ignores the Ninth Circuit's three-prong 4 test. The District Court exercises its discretion in light of (i) the stage of the proceedings, (ii) 5 potential prejudice, and (iii) the length and reason for delay—in this case, some ten months 6 occasioned by Righthaven's misrepresentations to the Court about its ownership interests. See 7 DU Opp. at 12.¹ Instead, Righthaven proposes a self-fulfilling test for timeliness—i.e., whether it 8 filed its motion to “intervene,” and created new facts, as soon as its original facts were rejected.
9 No court has ever endorsed such a test. Framing a motion as one to intervene does not afford the 10 right to invent new facts ten months into the litigation, after a summary judgment motion and 11 major discovery motions have been fully briefed, but held moot based on the facts Righthaven 12 originally submitted. June 14 Order at *7; Dkt. 117 at 2. At a minimum, Democratic 13 Underground would have to present these motions over again, at a cost of many tens of thousands 14 of dollars, due to Righthaven's failure to present its new facts earlier.

15 Regardless of its “intervention” rubric, Righthaven's motion is ultimately just a motion to 16 reconsider the June 14 holding that it does not have standing, based on new facts belatedly 17 created. As with Stephens Media's motion, “newly created evidence” does not qualify as “newly 18 discovered evidence” that could allow revisiting an issue after it is decided. See DU Opp. at 7-9.

19 B. Righthaven Has No Protectable Interest.

20 As explained above, because this Court has already determined that Righthaven has no 21 standing under the SAA, and because Righthaven has no right to revise the facts upon which that 22 determination was based, Righthaven has no protectable interest it may now assert.

23 Righthaven's claim to a protectable interest also fails for two further reasons. First, as a 24 champertous agreement, the SAA, and any amendments to it, remain unenforceable. Righthaven 25 attempts to avoid this result through oversimplification, arguing that the Ninth Circuit has 26

27 ¹ Remarkably, Righthaven claims, without citation, that its culpability for the delay is of no moment—whereas the 28 Ninth Circuit has specifically described the “reason for the delay” as a key factor. See, e.g., Cal. Dept. of Toxic Substances Control v. Commercial Realty Projects, Inc., 309 F.3d 1113, 1119 (9th Cir. 2002); accord League of United Latin Am. Citizens v. Wilson, 131 F.2d 1297, 1304 (9th Cir. 1997).

1 purportedly “held” that champerty is not an available defense. As previously explained, the Ninth 2 Circuit held only that champerty did not give rise to a tort cause of action. See DU Opp. at 22 3 n.10. Righthaven has no answer to the fact that the Ninth Circuit did not overrule Nevada law 4 recognizing champerty is a defense to claims of tortious conduct. See id.

5 Secondly, Righthaven does not substantively respond to Democratic Underground’s fraud 6 upon the court arguments, stating only that it has the right to amend its contract “to effectuate the 7 parties’ intent.” Dkt. 150 at 13. Righthaven incorrectly asserts that Democratic Underground 8 does not dispute that the Restated Amendment qualifies as a transfer of ownership under 9 Silvers—ignoring the fact that the Restated Amendment is in direct contradiction of the intent of 10 the original SAA and Clarification and recites as the parties’ intent precisely what this Court 11 found it not to be. DU Opp. at 19. Its conveyance of a “non-exclusive” license contradicts the 12 original’s grant back of an exclusive license. Id. And its assertion, nunc pro tunc, that 13 Righthaven has had a right to exploit the assigned copyrights for the last 18 months contradicts 14 reality—that Righthaven has had nothing other than the right to sue.

15 Moreover, Righthaven’s assertion that it has exclusive rights contradicts Stephens Media’s 16 actual grant of rights to others. On its face, the Restated Amendment is a sham, an attempt to 17 engineer a result by false presentation of a reality that did not exist. Righthaven does not address 18 the contradictions between Stephens Media’s licensing deals and the purported transfer of 19 ownership. Stephens Media also fails to seriously grapple with the issue, responding with a series 20 of factual non-sequiturs. Dkt. 151 at 4 n.1. For example, it does not matter if Stephens Media 21 also owns other copyrighted works unaffected by its Righthaven scheme (Hinuber Decl. (Dkt.
22 151-2) ¶ 5), nor that it owned this work prior to the purported assignment. Id. ¶ 6. What matters 23 is whether Stephens Media still owns the work as reflected by its ongoing conveyance of rights 24 only an owner can. Nor is it surprising (or relevant) that Stephens Media has disclosed the 25 existence of these licensing deals to its co-conspirator. Id. ¶ 7. Indeed, these deals were likely 26 one reason the SAA was so clear that Righthaven had no rights to exploit the copyrights. Instead 27 of providing these irrelevant factual allegations, Stephens Media needed to explain why it is 28 continuing to license rights it claims not to own as a result of its purported exclusive license to 1 Righthaven. DU. Opp. at 28-29 (discussing limitations in other Stephens Media licensing deals); 2 Dkt. 140-1 (Webb Decl.) Ex. 3 ¶ 19. It has failed to do so, choosing instead to support 3 Righthaven’s fraud upon this court.

4 Whether Righthaven’s new approach, in combination with the prior sanctionable conduct, 5 rises to the level of defiling the Court, or whether it simply reflects the baselessness of 6 Righthaven’s ownership claim, it certainly provides further basis to deny intervention.²

7 C. To the Extent the Court Finds Righthaven Could Have Some Protectable 8 Interest, That Interest Will Be Fully Protected by Stephens Media.

9 Even, assuming arguendo that Righthaven had some protectable interest, Righthaven 10 cannot avoid (and does not try to avoid) the well-settled presumption that its interests will be fully 11 represented by a related party pursuing the same objective. It also does not dispute that Stephens 12 Media has every incentive to defend against the counterclaim’s assertion of fair use, including its 13 owners’ substantial investment in Righthaven.

14 Instead, Righthaven argues that its interests are not fully protected only because Stephens 15 Media could not affirmatively recover against Democratic Underground if (contrary to the June 16 14 Order) it were now found to be a non-exclusive licensee after it purportedly transferred away 17 ownership via the Restated Amendment. Dkt. 150 at 10-12. Righthaven cries crocodile tears, 18 claiming that its purported post-decision transfer has put Democratic Underground in an 19 “enviable” procedural position. Id. at 11. The truth is that Righthaven and Stephens Media 20 attempted to divest Stephens Media of its claims after this Court found the latter to be the real 21 party, solely to undo this Court’s order. They do not dispute that they can also reverse that 22 collusive document’s language just as easily as they have repeatedly rewritten it before.

27 ² In addition, the proposed complaint (Dkt. 134-2) would violate Rule 11 because it alleges facts that Righthaven 28 knows to be untrue (such as “ongoing” harm, when it knows the post quoting the article has long since been removed) and—inexplicably—it seeks to seize Democratic Underground’s domain name, even though this Court found “Righthaven’s request for such relief fails as a matter of law.” Righthaven v. DiBiase 2011 WL 1458778 (D. Nev. April 15, 2011); accord Righthaven v. Choudhry, 2011 WL 1743839 (D. Nev. May 3, 2011).
