Citing cooperation in trial, judge gives man probation in tax case

By DOUG MCMURDO
LAS VEGAS REVIEW-JOURNAL

U.S. District Judge Robert Jones sentenced former real estate agent and mortgage broker Thomas Browne to three years probation and a $25,000 fine on Tuesday, five years after Browne entered a guilty plea to misdemeanor tax evasion and agreed to testify against his co-defendants.

"There's no need to jump on him with both feet," said Jones, who commended Browne for his "substantial cooperation" in the trial last year of Robert Kahre, the one-time owner of six construction companies in Las Vegas who paid his untaxed employees in gold and silver coins and who also, with Browne's assistance, hid millions of dollars in assets.

Kahre also paid roughly 30 business clients in the same manner, and then allowed recipients to immediately exchange the coins' market value for paper currency, telling them they could use the coins' face value for tax purposes.

Browne helped Kahre and Kahre's longtime girlfriend Danille Cline by creating false loan documents. Kahre was sentenced in November to more than 15 years in prison after a second jury trial. The first ended in a hung jury.

With about 20 supporters in the courtroom, Browne said little during the hearing. He is Kahre's former brother-in-law. Defense attorney Richard Wright said Browne had no criminal history prior to meeting Kahre, which Jones said played a role in sentencing.

Wright also argued with Jones regarding the plea agreement, and accused Assistant U.S. Attorney Gregory Damm of breaching an oral agreement regarding what could and could not be used against Browne in determining an appropriate sentence. The pre-sentence report recommended Browne receive a prison term.

Damm said the U.S. Department of Probation recommended incarceration, but the U.S. attorney's office was not bound by the recommendation. Like Wright, he asked Jones to grant probation.

Browne must serve the first four months of his sentence under house arrest.

Browne earned roughly $50,000 in commissions by helping Kahre avoid taxes on about $1.2 million.

Browne now owes about $49,000 in credit card debt, according to Damm, has two homes in foreclosure, and is no longer in real estate.

Green is the color in rural China

May 23rd, 2010 by jaqhiggins

ANLONG, China

This small village on the Zouma River “inside the municipal boundaries of Chengdu, the capital of Sichuan province” is the site of a fascinating effort to fight one of China’s biggest problems: the dangerous levels of pollution in its rivers and streams.

“In the last 30 years, China’s economic miracle has helped pull millions from poverty, but has put tremendous pressure on its ecosystems,” said Ma Jun, whose 1999 book “China’s Water Crisis” has been compared to Rachel Carson’s “Silent Spring.” “Sixty percent of our rivers are polluted,” and “300 million rural residents have no clean drinking water.”

China’s leadership has recognized the problem and adopted new regulations on industrial and agricultural pollution. But that doesn’t guarantee that all local officials “let alone polluters” will follow the rules.

That’s why some government officials, hard-pressed to meet the new standards, may support Chinese nongovernmental organizations that work to clean up the environment. And that’s how I came to be hurtling down a country road to look at a project run by the Chengdu Urban Rivers Association, or CURA, which works to persuade the public of the need to save the rivers.

Water problem

I have a special interest in this area. On my first trip to China, in 1986, I visited a village outside Chengdu shortly after communist communes had been disbanded, freeing peasants to farm on their own. Now the farmers are making the water problem worse.

“Half of our problem is agricultural pollution,” said Tian Jun, CURA’s energetic general secretary, who formerly worked for the government on projects to treat two terribly polluted rivers running through Chengdu. Despite progress, officials faced a continuing problem of runoff from chemical pesticide used by farmers living upstream from Chengdu.

So Tian left Online Education government and helped form CURA to try ...continue reading

CHATHAM | Middle-class area near where cop was slain tops city in major crimes

Comments

May 22, 2010

BY FRANK MAIN AND ART GOLAB Staff Reporters

The most violent part of Chicago? It's a section of Chatham, the largely middle-class, African-American neighborhood on Chicago's South Side that has long been a bastion of black lawyers, cops, plumbers and other professionals, a Chicago Sun-Times analysis has found.

"I am very, very surprised," said the Rev. Marc Robertson, 48, a Chatham homeowner for the last eight years.

"Almost overnight, we're at the top of violent crime?"

An unwanted spotlight was cast on Chatham last week, when Thomas Wortham IV, an off-duty Chicago cop, was shot to death by robbers trying to steal his new motorcycle as he left his parents' home.

But the current epicenter of violence in Chicago sits five blocks north of there — what the Chicago Police Department calls Beat 624.

The department divides the city into beats, 279 in all. And Beat 624 ranks No. 1 among them in violent crime for the first three months of 2010, according to the Sun-Times analysis, which takes into account the total number of major violent crimes reported — all of the murders, sexual assaults, robberies, aggravated batteries and aggravated assaults in every police beat.

Beat 632, where Wortham was killed, ranked 17th.

"We have seen a spike in violent crime," said Maryellen Drake, executive vice president of the Chatham-Avalon Park Community Council. "It's like a cancer. And it's spreading. We are trying to find out how to stop it. It's really becoming ugly for us out here."

Perhaps even more surprising, the analysis shows that three of Chicago's traditionally highest-crime police districts — Englewood on the South Side and Austin and Harrison on the West Side — didn't have any beats in the top 25.

The safest beats Flights to Queenstown in the city? That's a tie:

Hacks guide on Sports

Ivory & gold

June 1st, 2010 by macnorris

Source: Hindustan Times (Original Article)

When terror struck the African Nations Cup, Didier Drogba, captain and talismanic top-scorer for Les Elephants from the Ivory Coast, was "very sad and scared." But the sensitive and intelligent Drogba realised this wasn't just about football.

In an interview soon after the attack on the Togo team, he told Sports Illustrated: "When the crisis started in Ivory Coast, one of the first countries to come and help us was Angola. To leave wouldn't look good for the relations between the two countries."

For a man who has lived away from his native land for most of his life, Drogba's connection to the soil of his country, and to Africa, is as strong as ever. He will go wherever the Ivory Coast side travels, and his teammates, both at Chelsea and the national team, hail him as a natural leader.

In a country that has been ravaged by civil war, football was powerful uniting factor, with a golden generation of players from all over the country, including Drogba, Salomon Kalou, brothers Kolo and Yahya Toure and Emmanuel Eboue.

In 2004, Chelsea had a new coach, Jose Mourinho, and the special one picked up Drogba immediately. In his first season, he scored 16 goals, helping Chelsea to the Premier League title for the first time in 50 years.

October 2005 and the World Cup qualifying run was coming to an end. When the Ivory Coast beat Sudan 3-1 to qualify for Germany, Drogba showed maturity, statesmanship and courage beyond his years. He also showed he had the sensibility to recognize his popularity and use his influence outside the world of football.

Drogba summoned a cameraman from the national TV station and asked his team to gather around him. His words will go down in the history of the nation. "Ivorians, men and women, from the north and the south, the centre and the west, you've seen this," Drogba announced. 51s bobble lefty Mills' solid start

May 31st, 2010 by macnorris

Source: Las Vegas Review - Journal (Original Article)

The 51s wore camouflage uniforms Monday in honor of Memorial Day, but the design couldn't hide another poor display of defense by Las Vegas.

The Pacific Coast League leaders in errors, with 64 in 52 games, the 51s committed three errors in the last two innings, allowing the Rainiers to score four unearned runs en route to a 7-4 victory at Cashman Field.

Backed by a strong start by left-hander Brad Mills, Las Vegas carried a 3-1 lead into the top of the eighth. But then things went awry.

Ezequiel Carrera reached base on an error by third baseman Brian Dopirak, who bobbled the grounder before throwing wide of first base. Dopirak, a first baseman/designated hitter, was pressed into duty at third for the first time in his career after Kyle Phillips left the game in the fourth inning with an oblique injury.

With the bases loaded and two outs, Matt Mangini tagged a three-run triple to give Tacoma a 4-3 lead. Las Vegas left fielder Chris Lubanski dived but couldn't make the catch.

The 51s (21-31) tied the game in the eighth when Rainiers shortstop Chris Woodward booted a bases-loaded grounder by Luis Figueroa with two outs, letting Raul Chavez to score. Chris Aguila lined out to short to end the threat.

Tacoma's Jeffrey Dominguez led off the ninth with an unusual triple. He hit a high chopper to first that took a hard right and darted past 51s first baseman Brett Wallace down the right-field line.

"It hit something. It had spin on it and it shot dead left on (Wallace)," 51s manager Dan Rohn said. "There's not much he can do about it."

Woodward followed with a chopper that bounced over Dopirak into left field for an RBI double to give Tacoma a 5-4 lead. The Rainiers (24-24) added two more runs on two errors by 51s shortstop Jonathan Diaz, who was called up Monday from Double-A New Hampshire.

ARBER INSISTS DAGGERS WILL BE STRONG

May 30th, 2010 by macnorris

Source: Sportinglife.com (Original Article)

Captain Mark Arber has backed Dagenham to make the grade in League One after they achieved promotion in Sunday's play-off final at Wembley. The Daggers, who were playing non-league football only three years ago, beat Rotherham 3-2 in the enthralling clash to earn their place in the third tier and set up encounters against the likes of Sheffield Wednesday, Charlton and Southampton next season.

It is a meteoric rise for the east London club, whose average gate is just over 2,000, but Arber has risen through the leagues with the Daggers and believes they can hold their own.

“It’s the biggest level this club has ever played at in its history,” said Arber. “But I’m sure we’ll be strong. People won’t like coming to play us next year, it’s a tight ground and we play at a high tempo.

“People won’t look at Dagenham and think ‘that’s an easy game’. We give teams a tough time.

“We are going in the right direction. Hopefully we can sustain it next season. It’s a fantastic day for this football club and cheap flights to auckland I will cherish it for the rest of my life.”

Robinson’s Next Challenge

May 26th, 2010 by macnorris

Source: HoopsWorld (Original Article)

It seems that in the last 10-15 years, the path for young athletes to NBA has opened like flood gates.

The likes of Darius Miles, Kwame Brown, Gerald Green and Tyson Chandler used their superior athleticism to become first round, and in some cases lottery, picks in the NBA draft. The only problem being that several of these players were far more advanced athletes than basketball players. Without time to develop as basketball players, or as men for that matter, at the college level after going straight from the prep ranks to the pros, many young prospects flamed out and/or never reached (or in some cases, approached) their seemingly unlimited potential. In 2005, the NBA and its player's union reached a new collective bargaining agreement which implemented new rules with a minimum age requirement (19) and which stated that those who completed high school eligibility in the United States must be at least one year removed from high school.

Suddenly, the ability to out athlete high school competition wasn't enough to get you into the NBA and some would-be pro prospects were being forced to compete collegiately before having the opportunity to enter the NBA draft.

For former UConn star Stanley Robinson, the road to the NBA has, without a doubt, been more trying than that of some who came before him; in part because of the rule changes that came with a new CBA in 2005 but also because of the fact the Robinson's path simply has been his own.

Tampa Bay Buccaneers running back Carnell "Cadillac" Williams politely and patiently listens to a rehash of the team's 2009 season.

He is reminded his Bucs were 3-13 and finished 28th in the league in offense and 27th in defense. For the first time in 14 years, nary a Buccaneer was voted into the Pro Bowl. More often than not, plenty of empty seats could be seen at Raymond James Stadium.

So why is Williams laughing?

“I mean, if you dwell on all that stuff, what’s it going to get you?” he says through a continued chuckle during a recent phone conversation.

“I think we’re going to surprise some people this year. I know what we got.”

POWER RANKINGS: Few teams rated lower than Tampa

POWER RANKINGS: Few teams rated lower than Tampa

Sure about that?

“Oh, no doubt, man,” he says before pausing and adding, “I mean, I hope so.”

And there you have it.

But has this ship stopped taking on water? In this case, hope comes from a variety of sources:

- It comes from second-year quarterback Josh Freeman, who opened eyes last season after taking over as the starter in Week 9. He is being counted on to finally provide stability at what has become a revolving-door position.
- It comes from a roundly applauded draft class that includes defensive tackles Gerald McCoy, the third overall pick, and Brian Price, a second-rounder, and a pair of promising wide receivers in Arrelious Benn and Mike Williams.
- It comes from the unflappable enthusiasm of second-year coach Raheem Morris.
- And it comes also from Cadillac Williams, who followed a dazzling rookie season in 2005 with repeated physical breakdowns that eventually date night led to serious knee surgeries that cost ... continue reading

LONDON (AP) — Blackpool twice came from a goal behind to beat Cardiff 3-2 in Saturday's playoff final, clinching the last remaining place in the Premier League at the end of a season that many predicted would end with relegation.

Blackpool was in the lowest tier of English football as recently as 2001 but Brett Ormerod scored a 45th-minute winner to end his club's 39-year absence from the topflight and earn an estimated 90 million pounds ($129 million) in broadcast revenue and other income.

The Seasiders were up against the likes of Halifax, Barnet and Carlisle just nine years ago but will now play Manchester United and Chelsea next season.

"Over the season, I think we deserved it," Blackpool scorer Charlie Adam said. "To go to the places we're going to go, it's unbelievable. Going to Old Trafford and Stamford Bridge, you can't ask for anything else."

Cardiff was favored to win by bookmakers after finishing two places and three points above Blackpool in the second-tier League Championship and took the lead in the ninth minute through 4 million-pound ($5.8 million) record signing Michael Chopra.

Adam equalized four minutes later with a curling free kick before Joe Ledley restored Cardiff's advantage in the 37th with a low shot to the far post.

But Gary Taylor-Fletcher headed in a rebound for 2-2 and Ormerod then slammed in a shot from 12 meters (yards).

Chopra smashed a shot from the edge of the area onto the bar 12 minutes into the second half, but that was the closest the Welsh club came to leveling the scores.

"We knew the quality that Cardiff had and they showed it but my lads kept going," Blackpool manager Ian Holloway said. "I'm so proud. I cheap deal flights can't believe this."

A close contest was always ...continue reading

Byfuglien's OT goal nets Chicago 3-0 series lead

May 21st, 2010 by macnorris

Dustin Byfuglien scored 12 minutes, 24 seconds into overtime, and the Chicago Blackhawks beat the San Jose Sharks, 3-2, in Chicago on Friday night to take a commanding 3-0 lead in the Western Conference finals.

The Blackhawks can earn their first trip to the Stanley Cup finals since 1992 with a victory Sunday at the United Center.

Byfuglien went straight down the middle and took a nice pass from Dave Bolland, who was behind the net, to beat Evgeni Nabokov and set off a deafening roar.

"It's great, something I'll definitely remember," Byfuglien said. "Bolland made a good play and just laid it out in the slot, and all I had to do was finish."

Bolland scored on a breakaway to put Chicago ahead 2-1 in the third period, but Patrick Marleau answered for the Sharks, the West's top seed, with a rebound goal with 4:23 left in regulation to tie it and force overtime.

Marleau, who played junior hockey for the Seattle Thunderbirds and was the No. 2 overall pick in 1997, also scored in the second period on a power play, giving him four goals in two games.

"We've just got to stick with it and stay with it longer and harder," Marleau said. "I don't know how many missed shots we had. If we can hit the net that much more, the better our chances."

Patrick Sharp had a man-advantage goal for the Blackhawks, the second seed.

Philadelphia just rallied from a 3-0 deficit to beat Boston and advance to the Eastern Conference finals.

"It just happened, so it's not impossible. We can try to feed off of that," Marleau said.
